THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

THE WOMAN OF STYLE.

Clothes, as a Whole, Need Not Be of Latest Mode, But the Accessories Should Be.

The gown and hat do not constitute the whole costume. Naturally they are the major part of it, but a woman so often makes or mars her costume by a bad veil, the wrong belt, an ugly pair of gloves or an unbecoming collar.

There is something more than neatness in her shoes, also, if she would be well shod. There are distinct fashions in footgear as in headgear, in stocks as in belts, and often an entire change of style in veils, especially the way they are draped.

How often have you seen a woman you thought was very effectively dressed fashionable? You have recognized her last year's gown and hat in a color that is probably not first style this year, but the dash and fashion of her footgear, gloves, veil and belt made up for anything else about her that goes by.

It is a remarkable thing that a woman who shows herself clever and knowing about all these minor, but important trifles of dress, seems to be more fashionable than the woman who puts all her thoughts on a coat and skirt, and knows nothing of what the shops offer in the way of fashionable accessories.

True, it is not wise to rush into wearing every novelty that the counters offer. This is not being well dressed. But few women can afford to ignore knowledge if not adoption of all the new things that are brought out at least four times a season which are to be worn with the gown.—Anna Rittenhouse.

NICE CURTAIN MATERIALS.

Numbers of Lovely Curtains—Variety Given Below.

There are so many delightful curtain materials sold by the yard that a tour through the shops will show how much there is to choose from. Ray, silk, and china silk, chailles, linen tulle, Singapore lattice, bloom lilies, serge and even turkey red can all be used when plain materials are needed. As figured materials charming varieties can be found: cretonnes with their creamy grounds, white glazed chintzes with their strong designs of old-fashioned flowers, linen tafetas with stenciled floral effects, madras in soft greens, with old rose or yellow flowers, or madras in self-tones in lovely shades; they seem to grow more beautiful each season. Japanese cottons in blue and white, Java prints in strong contrasting colors, and also in yellow and white, red and white, and sometimes in green and white.

Among the oriental stuffs plain colors in deep rich shades can sometimes be found, and hold their color in a way that no western-made fabric seems capable of doing. Some of the muslins with flowers are also excellent for casement windows, only that good colors and designs must be selected as there are many poor things shown under this class of goods.

All the materials mentioned can be used for inner curtains, but they must not be chosen haphazard. Inner curtains must become part of the wall line and must be harmonious in color and design with the general wall treatment of the room in which they are used.

WILD DUCK OR GOOSE.

Clean Birds as Soon as Brought In—Mistake to Thing Gamy Flavor Is Thus Spoiled.

If the hunters of a party ever bring home wild ducks or geese, you want to know how to prepare them. Don't be led away by that old, mistaken idea that they want to hang awhile, without cleaning, to get the "gamy" flavor. The meat is "gamy" enough and if the entrails are not promptly removed, there'll be a very unpleasant flavor.

After plucking the birds, clean and wash them thoroughly and rub them well inside and outside with fine salt in which you have mixed some black pepper and nutmeg, if you like the flavor. Don't fill with anything, but do liberally with butter and bake brown, basting frequently. A cup of rich cream, added during the last hour of baking, improves the gravy.

Germans generally put a few bay leaves and slices of lemon in the baking pan, and instead of the cream they add a glass of good red wine at the last. If the bird is not very young, it is best to cover it in the very oven, later removing the cover, and adding water only when it is necessary. The gravy is thickened a little with flour.

There is no use trying to roast an old bird—the wild ones are even worse than the tame in that respect. But there is another way of preparing them, very palatable. After plucking and cleaning, cut them up and rub each piece with salt and lay in fresh vinegar over night. They can remain in vinegar longer, if necessary, but must be put in a cool (not freezing) place and turned often.

When ready to cook, take some good beef drippings, put in a pan over the fire with several onions cut fine, and when light brown, add flour and brown, stirring all the time. Next pour in enough boiling water to make a nice gravy, add salt, pepper and a little cloves and several bay leaves, a good piece of butter, and some vinegar. Then put in the parts of the duck or goose which have been lying in vinegar (throw the vinegar bath away), cover pot closely and stew slowly until tender. When done you can add some red wine to the gravy or not, just as you prefer. The gravy should be a little sour and spicy, but not too much so.

Wild rabbit can be prepared in the same manner. Some people drop in a lump of sugar when stewing the latter.—Farm and Home.

ON TRAINING OF CHILD.

An Interesting Experiment of Having Children Live Simple Life Comes Over in Simple Life.

New views of the child training problems are found in the foreign custom of providing separate playhouses, and sometimes separate living houses, for children. An English woman who had two grandchildren living near her had a small empty cottage which she believed might be made useful to them in teaching them to help themselves.

The little house only had one room on the ground floor, and she furnished it as a living room for them, and put a store of coal and wood just outside, which they brought in when they wanted it, and with which they learned to light their own fire. With the help of the governess they did cooking for themselves, washed up their own things, and were taught to keep everything in order, with some help and persuasion. They entertained their grandmother, and had other friends to tea, and sometimes they would get in provisions for their dinner and spend the whole day.

Convenient cupboards and places for putting everything were arranged in this cottage, and it was well equipped with pretty china of a size which was in happy medium between toy and utilitarian.

Other serious experiments have been made along the same line in England, one of the most prominent being that of the countess of Essex, who fitted up quite a sizable cottage on her country estate, and had her children and their governess live there a good part of the time. They had their own friends and servant, and took part in the house-keeping themselves, the object being in this case that they could live more simply here than they could at the hall.

A small, solid, well-built room, with one wall omitted, in which children can play during the day, is a common feature of the back lawns in Germany. Tables and chairs where children can have their little lunches are provided, and they act as hostesses to the elder part of the family at the hour for afternoon coffee or tea.—Chicago Tribune.

Rice Apple Pudding.

One-half cupful rice, three table-spoonfuls sugar, one-half table-spoonful butter, the juice of one-half lemon. One full half pint of thinly sliced apples, one-half pint of milk, and three eggs. Put the apples in a dish, pour over them the eggs and sugar, and set aside. Place the rice in a saucepan, cover with cold water, and boil five minutes. Drain rice, rinse in cold water.

Tarnished Silver.

One of the simplest means of cleaning silver that has become blackened by gas or oil is to mix a teaspoonful of ammonia with a cupful of water and use a little of this liquid to form a paste with whiting. Polish the article with the paste, using a soft chamois to apply it and another to polish.

Reassuring.

"Don't soak me for it dis time, judge," pleaded the man who was up for turkey stealing. "It's jest before Christmas—don't gimme no sentence. Lemme go an' you kin soak me twice as hard nex' time. Honest, judge, I'm never done out o' de business. I'll promise you'll get plenty more chances at me."—Cleveland Leader.

THE NOONDAY MEAL.

It Is Well Not to Eat a Meat Lunch, But Each Must Study Her Own Needs.

The girl who has only a small sum to spend each day for the noonday meal finds herself beset by gastronomical temptations. In the old days at home or in school, when nickels and dimes were handed out grudgingly, she always passed the bake shop or the candy store with yearning eyes. Now that she is mistress of her own small salary, she is apt to indulge a secretly harbored hunger for tarts and pastries covered with meringue. It will take all her will power to make the tart as of yore, an occasional treat, while the 15-cent allowance for lunch goes to better ends.

There is no use talking, girls, if we have small lunch allowances, we have to eat sensibly, not fancifully. We do not mean faded complexion, dull eyes, drooping figures, pallid lips and whining voices.

For the frugal girl, milk should form the foundation of the luncheon, but milk alone, or any other fluid, will not furnish sufficient nourishment. Solids and fluids must be mixed. Malted milk, stirred slowly, not gulped down at a strenuous soda fountain, is extremely nourishing. Milk and raw eggs, which can be secured at both drug stores and lunch rooms, cocoa and chocolate are strengthening noon time drinks. Graham or oatmeal crackers, or graham and whole wheat bread may be taken with the milk, and this with fruit will make an absolutely satisfying lunch—if you have not accustomed your palate to nontidie sweets.

The girl who can afford a more elaborate lunch, including meat, should not indulge in too many meat dishes, such as ragouts, croquettes, meat pie, dumplings, etc. A nicely broiled chop or bit of steak, a slice of roast beef, or better still, some delicately prepared fish will not only digest more easily, but will be better for the complexion, which has a hard enough time worrying along through a business career.

In the better class of restaurants one portion of meat or salad will be served to two persons, and in this way two girls, willing to pool lunch money, can divide a tasty piece of meat and a fresh salad at a reasonable figure. Many successful women say that they owe their good health to the fact that they never eat meat at noon, but you will find these women using a great deal of spaghetti, macaroni, rice, vegetables of various sorts, milk and eggs. Every woman is a law unto herself in the matter of the midday meal, and the quicker she finds out what does agree with her and fortifies her for the afternoon's work, the better for herself and her employer.

ARE YOU VERY TIRED?

Simplify Daily Duties as Far as Possible for We Were Not Meant to Overwork.

There is too much tiredness in the world, especially among business women.

Half the day's work has to be done by force of the will, since there is not force of body enough to carry them through. Most women accept this as unavoidable. To be tired is normal, whether one has charge of a baby or a typewriter. To tell them nature intended back and burden to be in due proportions does not help matters. They are too tired to theorize.

To get up fresh and cheery in the morning, do your duties vigorously, with energy, to spare for a smile, and lie down in the happy, wholesome weariness of a well-spent day—that surely was the original plan for our days.

Are we never to get back to it? Some say the way lies through gymnastics, others hunt for "Don't Worry" clubs and good resolutions. Still others seek it by simplifying the daily duties and throwing off the world's comparative standards. And the last are nearer to reaching the goal than any of the others.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Good for the Hands.

You might try a big basin of hot water softened with borax powder. Throw a teaspoonful of finely ground oatmeal in the water. By the time it is cool enough for your hands the water will be a deep milky hue and you will find it good for the hands.

Curtains for Dark Room.

If a room is dark and gloomy, curtains made of soft yellow madras or silk will diffuse the effect of sunlight into a room. If, on the other hand, the room has a southern exposure, greens and blues will tend to soften the light.

Coral Jewelry.

Quantities of coral made into chains, pins and brooches, set in gold. An old fashion revived.

Torn Black Kid.

When unfortunate enough to rub or tear a piece from the outer surface of a black kid glove or kid shoe, take a few drops of sweet oil and mix it with an equal amount of black ink. Apply this mixture to the white spot, or any part that may be rubbed, and the spot will hardly be noticeable. This treatment will also freshen an old pair of black kid gloves.

Disraeli and the Dukes.

Another Disraelian reminiscence occurs. After a banquet, at which a line of particularly illustrious nobles preceded the premier from the dining-room, he took the arm of his neighbor and, pointing to the backs of the retreating dukes and marquises, said, drily: "Next week I shall be making some of those."

ELKS IN CIRCLE DANCE.

Remarkable Exercise in Which Bands of the Animals Take Part.

But the grand curious amusement of the elk, which many hunters have witnessed, may be called their circle dance, writes Thompson Seton, in Scribner's Magazine. Mr. H. W. Skinner, of Chicago, sends me his observations on this performance:

"About four o'clock one afternoon late in August, 1890, I was riding northeast up a small stream flowing into one of the tributaries of the Green river, near its source in north-western Wyoming. The intense heat was only relieved by an occasional faint breath of breeze from the north. My attention was attracted by a column of fine, dark brown dust rising ahead of me (I was on the opposite side) of the creek (I was on the south side).

"The column of dust looked almost as if caused by a whirlwind. On reaching a point as close to it as I could get without crossing the creek—I was perhaps 100 yards from it—I found that it was caused by a band of elk, numbering from 12 to 20, who seemed to be trotting quite rapidly with occasional awkward galloping plunges in a circle perhaps 30 feet in diameter. They were going in the same direction as the hands of a watch in the edge of a little belt of second-growth timber mainly, I think, quaking asp.

"They were moving, not with heads up, but with noses only a foot or two from the ground. My impression is that they were all bulls. Owing to the dense clouds of dust which occasional light puffs of wind blew almost toward me, I could not see very clearly. It seemed to me that they were running about as 'milling' cattle do, except that I never knew of cattle to 'mill' in such a small bunch. I have related this incident several times to hunters and trappers, who could offer no explanation of it. There were large numbers of elk in that country at the time in bands of various sizes."

This remarkable exercise has no obvious relation to the sexual instinct or to hygiene and marks several important steps in the evolution of amusement. If to it we could add a little music we should have the essentials of social dancing.

CORNERSTONE DATA.

Old Occupation in Which Illinois Deputy Sheriff Engages.

One of the oldest occupations followed in this age is that of the professional collector of data for cornerstone boxes. Probably Bloomington is the only town in America that is able to boast of such an expert, to whose mind and hands the packing of all the boxes that are buried in the town is turned over, says the Chicago Daily News.

Deputy Sheriff Stevenson is the name of the man who likes to engage in this kind of work, and he seems to have all he can do. Within a short time he has packed boxes for the new county court house, public library, Livingston building and several park structures. He is now engaged in preparing data for three copper boxes that will be placed in the cornerstone of a park pavilion. The boxes and their contents will weigh 15 pounds.

Mr. Stevenson has some queer ideas about what kind of stuff should go into a cornerstone box. The daily and weekly papers are always included, but there is a great variety of other things. He collects a number of trade catalogues that show what the people of his age eat and wear, how they have their houses and offices furnished, and whether they ride a horse, bicycle or in an automobile. One hundred years or less hence, should a cyclone come along and lift the buildings of the town from their foundations, the people of that time will have a great time studying over the odd things that they will dig out of the foundations.

Not long since the town suffered a great loss of business houses by a devastating fire. Some of the foundations of buildings that had been built a long time ago yielded the town valuable historical facts that kept the town interested for weeks afterward. The residents became thoroughly enthused on the subject of cornerstone boxes and

Badly Expressed.

"Maybe some people don't misuse the English language," remarked the young student. "Sometimes I have to laugh at the way foreigners apply some of our terms and words. I remember an instance where a Creole planter was attempting to make terms with a bunch of laborers he wanted to hire on his sugar plantation. The laborers applied to him for work and he said he could give them employment if they would accept his terms. These terms, by the way, were $1.25 per day and board, or $1.50 per day without board. Here is how the Creole put it when the laborers asked him about the wage question: 'One dollar an' a quarter an' I eat you, or $1.50 an' you eat yourself.'—New Orleans.

CLAIMED BY TWO HUNTERS

Deer Shot by One Claimed by Another Who Thought It Was His Meat.

"Deer are coming back to the old ground again," said Chris Jergensen, one of the oldest ranchers of the Deer Lodge valley, reports the Anaconda Standard. "People who lived in my section of the valley will remember the great droves of deer that used to visit the swamps east of Anaconda."

"There are a few white tail deer in the valley now, and they are so tame that I really believe they know all about the state game laws. Many times I have taken my rifle and tramped through the swamps on the lookout for deer and closely watching all openings in the brush. In tracking deer through the thick brush it was not uncommon to run across fresh bear tracks, and when I did it was for the open as fast as I could travel. I had an experience with a big cinnamon bear that I shall not soon forget. With a companion I was hunting deer, and we came upon a large she cinnamon bear, and my companion was torn almost to fragments."

"The bear jumped from behind a brush, and almost before I knew what was going on my companion was dead and I had killed the bear. By a lucky chance, my bullet had found a fatal spot."

"I ran across a fine band of deer in my meadow, and I followed them carefully for a long time. I managed to get within easy range without disturbing the deer and picked out a nice buck and fired and he fell to the ground dead. Just then another shot rang out, and before I could get to my deer another man, living in a cabin close by, appeared with a knife and cut the animal's throat. It appears that he had shot at the band and believed it was his shot that brought down the venison. We had a very heated argument about it, and perhaps fortunately for both of us a neighbor happened along and suggested that we toss up a coin to decide the question of ownership. I won out and proudly carried my venison home."

Familiar Plea.

It was at the church fair. "Chances are $10 each," said the pretty girl.

The man was equal to the emergency. "All I want is half a chance," murmured he.—Pittsburg Post.
